Poor Oysters-The Recent Murder-A Theory-Other sotes. adence of the Richmond Dispatch.] NORFOLE, March 3, 1888.

The oyster season is rapidly drawing to a close, and nearly every dealer in this section has lost money. This is attributed to the fact that the packers have had to pay the catchers higher than usual for stock and oysters have been remarkably poor, scarcely producing more than a half gallon to the bushel. Unless the shuckers can get three quarts of solid meats from a bushel the business is not very profitable. The best oysters this season have come from the Rappahacnock river; but those from the rocks in James river and York river never were so poor and indifferent. The rocks of the Rappahannock have therefore been well worked as far up as Bowler's wharf, not only by the catchers of this section, but by fleets of oyster-vessels from the Eastern Shore. Owing to the very open winter experienced on the seaboard, the planters have not taken up nearly as many of their oysters as they would have done with favorable weather and consequent favorable prices. Last season the oyster-packers all made money, and this season have sunk last
